

Kid[®]

Common European Framework

KID is a magazine designed for use in the study of the English language, based on the guidelines of the Common European Framework, which has 3 levels of reference: Basic (A1, A2); Independent (B1, B2); Proficient (C1, C2). KID magazine is for intermediate students between levels B1 and B2.

The magazine has 5 issues, each one corresponding to a teaching unit. Each KID issue includes easy and stimulating exercises which can be used as they are or along with textbooks. It is a mini English course in 'magazine format', which is ideal because:

- it has practical lessons, already prepared, divided into 5 teaching units
- it is useful for self-learning and self-assessment
- it helps to prepare for language certification
- it combines different educational disciplines

Once the students have completed the magazines, they will be able to understand keywords of various subjects and write about themes they are interested in, describing experiences and events and understanding the main ideas of difficult texts with real and abstract topics.

The layout

Each issue of the magazine is designed as one teaching unit with the key parts being the Report on pages 5, 6 and 7 and the games for revision on page 15, as well as vocabulary and grammar references on the other pages.

It has the same themes throughout which are dealt with in different ways. This is useful because:

- it gives each magazine one single theme without being monotonous;
- allows vocabulary and grammar to be memorised and revised repeatedly;
- allows students to immediately put into practice everything they have learned.
